

ILO Publications on the Working conditions in the LRG sector

These reports were produced as a result of PSI's request to the International Labour Organisation to enhance the visibility of LRG workers within the institution and cast some much needed light on the sector. PSI contributed to the terms of reference of the research and some PSI affiliates were involved via interviews and questionnaires.

We hope this will be of interest for discussion, debate and cross-benchmarking among our affiliates and that you can use it with your LRG employers and national authorities to spur debate in a view to negotiate and ensure better working conditions for all LRG workers worldwide.

Europe: Institutional and labour relations regimes promoting decent working conditions for Local and Regional Government (LRG) Workers

This publication presents a comparative analysis of the Local and Regional Government (LRG) sector workforce in five European countries: Croatia, Germany, Greece, Spain, and Sweden. This publication follows a previous paper on Latin America.

ILO Working paper 114

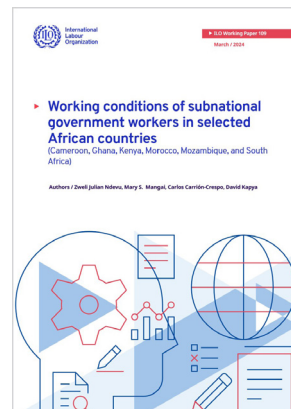

(2 May 2024)

English only

Africa: Working conditions of subnational government workers in selected African countries

This report provides a comprehensive evaluation of the institutional and labour relations regimes in six African countries: Cameroon, Ghana, Kenya, Morocco, Mozambique, and South Africa with a special emphasis on promoting decent working conditions for Local and Regional Government (LRG) workers.

ILO Working paper 109

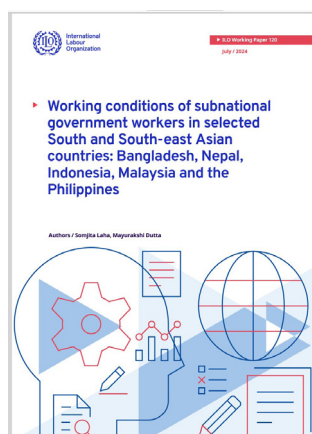

(March 2024)

English only

Asia/Pacific: Working conditions of subnational government workers in selected South and South-east Asian countries: Bangladesh, Nepal, Indonesia, Malaysia and the Philippines

This study investigates the working conditions of subnational government (SNG) employees in select South and Southeast Asian countries, viz. Bangladesh, Nepal, Malaysia, Indonesia, and the Philippines. It is situated in the context of decentralized governance which transfers powers, responsibilities, and resources from central governments to subnational authorities for greater efficiency, accountability, and public service delivery. It also highlights the role of regional and local governments in Sustainable Development Goal (SDG) localization.

ILO Working paper 120

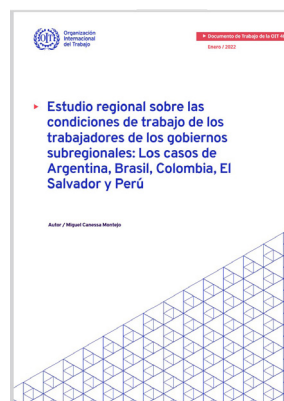

(July 2024)

English only

Latin America: Estudio regional sobre las condiciones de trabajo de los trabajadores de los gobiernos subregionales

The aim of this study is to develop a comprehensive global analysis of the working and employment conditions of subnational government workers, such as recruitment, remuneration, vocational training and good labour practices and to shed light on the rights and working conditions of this group of people.

ILO Working Paper 46

(January 2022)

Spanish only

For more information: Lrg-municipal@world-psi.org

Daria Cibrario

Senior Policy Officer, Local and Regional Government Sector/OSH/Research

PSI

daria.cibrario@world-psi.org